

Lulu Group partners with NHI to recruit and train students

Lulu Group has joined hands with National Hospitality Institute (NHI) to provide training for students and give them an opportunity to be a part of the leading retailer in the Middle East.

Under the new scheme, Lulu has partnered with NHI for a student intake programme wherein students trained at NHI would take up the role of chefs in various Lulu stores. Accordingly, seven students of NHI were trained and employed by Lulu Group. All the new recruits successfully completed nine months of training programme at Lulu Group, including three months of 'on-floor training' at various fresh food departments.

It was a moment of joy when the students met Shabeer KA, regional director - Lulu Oman, to extend their gratitude for giving them an opportunity to work with the retail giant. Shabeer appreciated the students for their decision to start off their career with Lulu Group. In return, the participants expressed their interest to work with Lulu in future.

During the ceremony, Shabeer commented, "I truly feel that Lulu is a company where employees can follow their dreams. We give endless opportunities for our employees to learn and grow. It is a place where those who seek to build a career for themselves can cheerfully do so."
