

NHI hosts hotels for on-job training workshop

National Hospitality Institute (NHI) recently hosted several of their hotel clients at NHI for a workshop focused on the need to support on-job training (OJT).

Many of the students at NHI attend OJT as part of their training course. This allows them to see the real side of the hospitality industry and also helps them assimilate whilst still on training. Hotels encourage such training as it provides the students with a real insight to the industry.

The workshop was conducted by NHI with the support of Evangeline, head of learning and development at InterContinental Hotel Muscat.

Other hotels that attended were Crowne Plaza convention centre, Kempinski Hotel Muscat, Shangri La, Coral Muscat Hotel and Anantara Salalah.

Robert Maclean, principal of NHI, said, "We are delighted with the turnout for this event and are very appreciative of the support from Evangeline."

NHI is the key provider of hospitality training in Oman and works with the hospitality industry to ensure that sufficient people are being trained for the growing tourism potential in Oman.

Any information on their activities can be obtained from their website www.nhioman.com.
